The 'President Ronald Reagan' Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI), nicknamed the "Star Wars program", was a proposed missile defense system intended to protect the United States from attack by ballistic strategic nuclear weapons (intercontinental ballistic missiles).

That is not necessarily all true, or there were certain omissions and denials proffered. There is a lot more behind the program including offense capabilities against UAPs (not sure they were called that back then).

Part of the SDI effort was an XRay Laser powered by nuclear technology. Small nuclear explosions apparently produce huge bursts of X-rays and sonar incidents. I do not understand the technology, These were intended to defeat hostile threats from space, including UAPs.

Back in 2003, the Army Space and Missile Defense Command had the mission. The Army was developing and providing current and future global space and missile defense to the Army. This included protocol for UAPs.

President Dwight Eisenhower was actually the one who initiated the concept for the program, which was to include offensive weapons. It was not until Ronald Reagan was the President that it was revealed to the general public.

The program is classified to this day. In one of my investigations, I travelled to Army Space and Missile Defense Command and interviewed very senior Army leaders about this and various other programs.

I know you are very busy, but wanted to share this with you for your situational awareness now.

We will have a lot to go over at [REDACTED].
